

You Reap what you sow, or at least you deserve to

In business we work with people we trust.

We have been regularly told that we are in unprecedented times which is undoubtedly true. We have already experienced lockdowns. During this time we will all have experienced using the services of a business / company that has delivered a good service when perhaps others in the same sectors have failed to do so. That may be the result of being overcome by demand, or just not having the systems or technology in place to be able to provide a reasonable service.

A lot of the time however, it can just be the result of Good Management and Leadership.

Personally I believe that good service during difficult times deserves loyalty, and I hope that businesses that have gone the extra mile will, when we come out of this, reap the rewards they deserve.

Similarly, there are Landlords, financial institutions, and service providers who have been understanding and supportive and that should not be forgotten when the good times return, which I am confident they will.

Unfortunately there are two sides to everything and there are individuals / businesses that have used circumstances to take advantage of their customers / service providers / suppliers. They should similarly not be forgotten and will perhaps also reap what they sow.

At Bargate Murray, we pride ourselves in continuing to provide a high level of service whilst adhering to Covid Regulations and protecting our staff. Please feel confident to contact us should you require any additional services. As an ABS, you would be amazed at what we can help you with.

Graham Agass - Non-Executive Director

Graham had a long career in banking starting in 1970. He spent 44 years in various roles and managerial positions.

During his career, Graham held positions in Marketing & Sales, organising representation at such profile events as Dunhill British Masters Golf, Burghley Horse Trials and East of England Show.